Background

With over 100 employees in Sydney and San Francisco, Dovetail helps teams turn customer data into actionable insights the whole organization can access through one intuitive, collaborative, and searchable insights hub.

One of Dovetail's core company values is to "put the customer first." That's why they're SOC 2 Type II and GDPR compliant, and encrypt all data in transit via TLS 1.2. And why keeping data private, secure, and compliant is paramount for the organization's IT manager, Jan van der Kolk.

"I'm responsible for onboarding and offboarding employees and any IT support tickets," Van der Kolk explains. "If anyone has issues or needs access to certain tools, I manage that. I also manage our tech stack, all the apps we use across the business, and their security settings. I make sure we have proper security practices set up."

Van der Kolk juggles a lot of competing demands that go well beyond security.

With a fast growing business, Van der Kolk wanted to introduce a tool that would scale while also making it easy for everyone to follow best security practices. As Van der Kolk says: “We’re a startup and as we grow it becomes harder but also more important to have a company culture that emphasizes security.”

Because of his extensive previous experience as an IT Manager, Van der Kolk understands the importance of choosing the right tool for the job – not only making security compliant, but also user-friendly.

I have used other password managers at previous jobs. They all get the job done but there was always something that made it less intuitive for employees to use. That just leads to frustration and ultimately people stop using it all together. Sometimes it was a bug with the product, or sometimes it was the UI that wasn’t intuitive, or a feature that did not work as you would expect, like the permission structure.

Usability is a must-have for adoption at scale

More than 35% of employees have procrastinated, delegated, or skipped setting up new work security apps because of burdensome login processes. Businesses can easily prevent this by choosing tools that make it easy for employees to stay secure and productive.

1Password is designed with people in mind. We understand that the best security solution doesn't mean anything if people can't use it. That's why our apps and browser extension are designed to help teams get their work done without security getting in the way.

This is something Van der Kolk appreciates. He recognizes that 1Password's intuitive design makes it more effective than other password managers. "I've been a long-time 1Password fan," he says. "I use it personally with my family as well. It's my most used app!"

He adds: "For work we just log in to tools non-stop throughout the day. 1Password makes the whole process seamless."

With 1Password Business, every Dovetail employee also has access to a free 1Password Families account, so they can practice using good security both at work and at home. This helps reinforce the importance of taking security seriously in all aspects of life and gets the team comfortable using 1Password.

By making security simple, 1Password keeps Dovetail's growing workforce secure without impacting their productivity.

1Password helps us maintain our security culture as we scale and grow. It's important to have one tool across the business that we can rely on for everyone to safely store and share credentials. As we grow, Dovetail will also become a bigger target.

Saving teams time with 1Password

Van der Kolk includes 1Password in his security training so he can highlight why employees should take security seriously, and the role 1Password plays in protecting everyone's data.

“During the onboarding process, we set up 1Password, explain how we use it, and why it's important,” he says. “In the first week, every new hire goes through security awareness training where we talk about password managers and security more broadly, and why it's important for us.”

Dovetail uses shared vaults in 1Password to organize information and give individual departments – including finance, operations, and engineering – everything they need to do their work.

95% of employees at Dovetail have adopted 1Password into their daily routine. 1Password helps them create passwords on the fly and login without any hassle – so they can stay secure and access the tools they need, when they need them.

We no longer get any IT requests for resetting passwords. It's a very manual task for an IT manager to log in to the tools and see what happened and change the password. With a lot of people and tools, that time adds up. Now, I notice a lot fewer requests coming in about passwords and 1Password.

1Password supports Dovetail with data compliance

Van der Kolk knows that the benefits of adopting an enterprise password manager go beyond keeping employees safe. Using 1Password also signals to Dovetail's customers that they take security seriously.

As Van der Kolk explains: "Using a password manager is an important part of us being SOC2 compliant, which is important in keeping our customers' trust. They can check we are compliant and that we take security seriously."

"We're not just compliant because we have to be compliant," he adds. "Once you lose trust, and once you have a security incident, you can't really get trust back again. So we just want to do it right from the start".
